BUCKS COUNTY CERTIFIED AS CRITICAL DEFENSE AREA; WILL PAVE WAY FOR BUILDING BOOM

Stage is Set for One of The Largest Housing Developments in The East — Relaxes Credit Restrictions on Homes Built for Sale or Rent

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8—Bucks County on Saturday was certified officially as a "critical defense area." This step will pave the way, it is expected, for one of the largest housing developments in the mobilization program. Efforts to have the action taken by the United States Government have been growing in scope for the past two months. Labor, community developers and industrial leaders joined hands in spurring action on the part of the government.

The certification was made by Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson and Secretary of Defense Robert Lovett, following a recommendation from the Defense Production Administration.

The approval of the three agencies automatically relaxes credit restrictions on homes built for sale or rent to an estimated 5,000 steel mill hands, plus about 12,000 wives and children who will flock to the county.

The Fairless Works are being built in the heart of Bucks county in Falls Township near Morrisville. The huge plant, which will materially increase steel output for the defense program, is expected to be completed about the middle of 1952.

In addition to the steel plant, Henry J. Kaiser is turning out aircraft parts in the vicinity. New churches, schools, stores and hospitals are planned in the area. At present Gunnison Homes, Inc., a Big Steel subsidiary, is erecting prefabricated homes for workers at the rate of 18 a day and expects to complete about 1,000 by the end of 1951.

REVERSAL SOUGHT OF COURT RULING IN BRIDGE CASE

Burlington County's Purchase of Two Spans is Ordered Set Aside

THE BRIEF IS OUTLINED

Court Had Condemned Sale Because It Was Concluded Speedily

PALMYRA, N. J., Oct. 8 — Reversal of a court ruling which ordered Burlington county's purchase of two Delaware river bridges set aside is requested in a brief filed with the State Supreme Court.

The brief was filed by Milton M. Unger, attorney for the Burlington-Bristol Bridge Co., which sold the Burlington-Bristol and Tacony-Palmyra spans to the county.

The former private owners, including Maj. Gen. Clifford R. Powell, T. R. Hanft and Robert K. Bell, are appealing Superior Court Judge Freund's ruling that the transaction be voided.

In requesting a reversal of the decision, the brief contends that: 1. The trial court erred in holding that the sale was procured by improper conduct and that it contravened public policy.

2. The trial court erred in awarding a counsel fee to plaintiffs.

3. The judgment contravenes the Federal and State Constitutions and deprives defendants of their rights under Federal legislation.

The brief also states:

"It cannot be questioned but that Continued on Page Two

Claim Passenger Car Skidded Out of Control During Rain and Crashed Head-On Into Bus Which Had Halted for Traffic Light at Calico Corner, Bensalem Twp.

Two men were killed in a highway accident during the rain yesterday afternoon. Torrential rain last evening made visibility almost nil at times, turned gutters into wide streams, inundated streets and highways in some instances, and with the accompanying wind ripped down tree limbs. Streams, which had dropped to but a few inches during a prolonged dry period, were suddenly filled with water, which poured into them from the higher land.

The two who met death in an accident at Calico Corner, Lincoln highway, Bensalem township, are:

Seaman Anthony Ioannilli, 24, who is attached to a ship at Norfolk, Va., Naval Base.

Cpl. Samuel W. Haney, 19, Fort Hancock, N. J.

The accident taking the lives of the two young men is blamed directly on the slippery highway.

Ioannilli and Haney were riding in a sedan driven by Cpl. Robert Weekly, 20, Sulphur, La. Weekly is also stationed at Fort Hancock.

Joseph Gatusky, 27, operator of a New York bound bus, informed police he had halted his bus at a traffic light on the Lincoln highway at the intersection of Street road.

As the light turned green, he added, a sedan headed toward Philadelphia, appeared over a rise. He is of the opinion it skidded, went out of control, and crashed head-on into the bus. The sedan in which the servicemen were riding was demolished.

Haney died instantly, and Ioannilli died en route to Nazareth Hospital, Philadelphia. Weekly was also taken to the same hospital. He has a fracture of the left knee-cap and possible fracture of the left thigh. The driver of the bus, Gatusky, has internal injuries. He is under treatment at the same hospital.

Weekly told officers he and the others in the car had been visiting at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Kutzer, Brownsville road, near Langhorne. Weekly was driving Ioannilli to Philadelphia where the latter planned to take a train for Norfolk, where his ship, the Continued on Page Six

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

The Communists in Korea consented to General Ridgway's demand that armistice talks be resumed at some place other than Kaesong and suggested Panmunjom, six miles southeast of Kaesong.

They also suggested a five-mile neutralized zone under the protection of "both sides" that would include Munsan, the allied base camp, as well as Kaesong.

There were three developments in the China-policy controversy. The diary of the late Senator Vandenberg revealed that the National Security Council had advised President Truman to end aid to the Nationalists.

The diary did not bear out Harold E. Stassen's statement that the suggestion had come from Secretary Acheson and Dr. Philip C. Jessup. Prof. Owen Lattimore made public the transcript of his remarks at a State Department conference to answer another Stassen charge, and fifty-five House Republicans urged the Senate not to confirm Dr. Jessup as United Nations delegate.

ACE IN THE HOLE

Fishing experts have learned that the more prosperous Americans become, the more fish they consume. It isn't a matter of price, because the price of fish remains fairly stable. But when more people are working and buying, more fishermen take to the seas to catch the fish to meet the demand. The demand for fish is reported to be at an all-time high.

This seems to contradict our individuals who fear the population will soon exceed the earth's food resources. It is pointed out that 71 per cent of the earth's surface is water and that the ocean is twice as productive of plant and animal life per acre as the land.

With exceptions, such as salmon which is becoming scarcer because streams are being dammed for hydro-electric power, there are always enough fish of one kind or another to supply demand. Experiments with ocean plant life as a source of food are under way. Oquaculture, the science of raising vegetables in water, is making progress.

If the land finally becomes eroded by wind and water so it won't grow anything but cactus or support any animal life except gila monsters, man can turn to the sea from which theoretically all life sprang. New methods would be necessary to harvest the food, new tastes acquired to replace those for apple pie and mushroom - garnished portershouse.

But the specter of starvation would be eliminated.

ACCESS TO NEWS

An announcement from the White House states that President Truman will stand pat on his executive order authorizing federal civilian agencies to withhold information from the public for security reasons. Leading newspapers throughout the country have attacked this order, as have organizations of editors and publishers.

Editors know that the first step in the collection and distribution of news is free access to news sources. It is their conviction that officials on all levels, national, state and local, are expanding their efforts to conceal public information.

The American press can defeat this trend if strong resistance is offered to whatever threatens to intercept news at its source. It is against this background that President Truman was called upon to rescind his order for withholding of certain categories of information.

That there can be security without censorship was demonstrated in World War II. What was accomplished then can surely be accomplished now, if the President will discuss with representatives of the press the dual problem of providing security without intercepting contact with original news sources.

mittee, R. F. Harned; finance committee, W. H. H. White; paths committee, B. Landreth, Jr.; legislation committee, A. Weir Gillespie; progress committee, William C. Peirce.

The following poem was found by Mr. Minster among his effects, he stating he has "no idea where it came from":

BRISTOL.
A city, ancient as the hills,
Supported chiefly by its mills,
An atmosphere of typhoid ill,
For which the people take their pills
And save themselves the doctor's bills

Is Bristol
Here Washington once made abode,
And through these streets in charge rode.
The bugle's blast was long and loud,
As to the right and left he bowed,
And wine from many bottles flowed.

In Bristol
And here the shades of Lafayette
Are seen upon the streets as yet.
An old stone house with sign "To Let"
Now marks the spot where these men met,
For them the sun will never set

In Bristol
The people fish and eat their shad,
The only fish that's to be had,
And really think it isn't bad,
But transients cry "Enough Egad!
I either bid farewell to shad

Or Bristol
A century has changed it not,
Each man contented with his lot,
Leaves to his child the sacred spot,
Where passed his life, and is forgot,
To modern ways they give no thought

In Bristol.
Its mission seems to be fulfilled,
A place where time is simply killed,
And now and then a voice is stilled,
By native sons the soil is tilled,
And time goes on as God has willed things. But there is a group of able and astute Southern political leaders, some of whom will be at Hot Springs, who are determined to make it so.
In Bristol.

The anti-Truman Southern sentiment is minimized by such White House Fair Deal mouthpieces as Mr. Jonathan Daniels, of North Carolina; by the more blatant members of the Cabinet and by various left-wing journalists who dwell upon the futility of the Truman opposition in the South and the alleged gains which he is making there. However, when they get through they have done nothing to alter the basic fact, attested by practically everyone informed about conditions — which is, that there exists today a very much stronger feeling against Mr. Truman in the South than in 1948. In that year, it will be recalled, a number of Southern delegates bolted the Democratic convention. The Dixiecrat movement followed with the resulting loss to Mr. Truman of four Southern states — Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina — and one electoral vote from Tennessee, a total of 39.

No one doubts that since then Southern resentment and discontent has greatly grown. The reasons there is no longer a "Solid South" upon which the Democratic party can count are well known and should not be obscured. They date from the Roosevelt campaign of 1936. During that contest Mr. Roosevelt not only made complete his political alliance with the leaders of the CIO and AFL, but made a deal by which he took over the big Negro vote in the pivotal Northern states which for generations had been a basic Republican asset. The details of the latter have been recounted here several times. Inspired by ex-Senator Guffy, of Pennsylvania, executed by Mr. Farley, then Democratic chairman, and supported with unlimited Federal patronage furnished by Mr. Roosevelt, this was regarded by its author and sponsors as the cleverest political coup in American party history.

Both of these alliances, of course — but particularly that with the Negroes — were exceedingly obnoxious to the South. However, while Mr. Roosevelt lived, the South, though disgruntled and apprehensive, refrained from open demonstration because of its conviction that Mr. Roosevelt, while making the required gestures, never really intended to force upon the South the legislation desired by the Negro leaders. In this they were correct, but the situation is different with Mr. Truman. The pressure from the Negro politicians, the labor bosses and the professional liberals, generally, is such that Mr. Truman's advocacy of this legislation is very much more real and formidable than Mr. Roosevelt's.

the transaction was a profitable one for the county. The tenacity with which the county has fought to retain control of the bridges proves this.

"The county invested not a cent of its own money nor did it pledge its credit in acquiring two bridges, which will be paid for out of revenues derived from their operation."

In reply to the court's statement that the spans "would have become available in 1951 for approximately $5,000,000," the brief says:

"The court was referring to the possibility of an acquisition of the bridges by means of condemnation under the Federal statute. Its statement contains two incorrect assumptions. There is no assurance that the bridges would have become available for condemnation purposes in 1951. Before condemnation under the cost plus formula may take place, the bridges must have been in private hands for a minimum period of 20 years after the date of completion as certified by the Secretary of War."

"Neither the Secretary of War nor his successor in office has, to date, so certified the completion of the bridges."

Referring again to the possibility of condemnation by the state, the brief maintains:

"It appears that the state's plan of acquisition contemplates the operation of the bridges over a 30-year period at a cost to the traveling public during this 30-year period, in net profits alone, of $39,000,000."

"It would seem that the acquisition of the bridges by the county would result in greater advantage to the traveling public than will the acquisition by the state."

In its argument that the court erred in paying a $50,000 fee to former Attorney General Van Riper, the state's counsel, the brief states:

"The quantum of the fee is not questioned. We cannot conceive of any case in which an attorney in the course of a trial accomplished so much with so little evidence as did the attorney for the plaintiffs. The right to the counsel fee, and the authority of the court to make the award is challenged."

In conclusion, the brief maintains:

"The court condemned the sale because it was concluded speedily. Nevertheless, there was no proof that the county suffered as a result. The contrary is true. But for the quick action of the county officials, tremendous advantage to the county and the traveling public would have been lost."

"WASHINGTON REPORT"

By FULTON LEWIS, JR.
(Copyright, 1951
King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Washington, Oct. 8. Socialists in Great Britain have retained postwar control of the government by asserting that they have improved the lot of the common man.

The claim is strictly phony and it may be that the British people will upset the labor government in the forthcoming general elections. An upset is far from certain, however, because nobody knows how long it takes the common man to get a bellyful of having his life controlled by social planners who never have sweat a day in their lives.

The British people, just as we have in this country, will get one more chance to restore a little sanity to their government. If they fail to take advantage of these elections, the next step for the socialists will be totalitarian control and maybe even amalgamation with the Kremlin.

Most Britons are aware that their standard of living has dropped sharply under socialist beneficence. Prices are higher, food scarcer, and government interference more troublesome.

Instead of raising the standard of British hearth, farm and factory, the Socialists have exported huge chunks of British production to Russia and other iron curtain countries. In fact, large quantities of ECA goods sent by the U. S. for British use have been transhipped to the Soviet Union.

Hugh Gaitskell, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, in recent financial talks in this country, blandly informed the American people that Britain had to trade with the Communists.

He said Britain sent finished goods to Russia in exchange for Communist grain and timber. What he failed to mention, however, is that British exports to Russia surpass Soviet imports into Britain by a wide margin. They could cut their exports to Russia in half and still more than pay for the Communist grain and timber they are importing. In other words, more than half of Britain's sales to Russia are for the purpose of getting Russian gold in return — not for the purpose of getting economic necessities.

If these excess sales-for-gold-profit were eliminated, the British people would be able to retain, for their own use, substantial quantities of machinery, household supplies and foodstuffs now going to the Soviet Union. Their standard of living and the efficiency of their production would have improved instead of degenerating over the past five years.

British food production is inadequate. Yet in the last year for which statistics are available, the socialists shipped 57,600 tons of hay bales, binders and small combines to Communist and other foreign countries. It can be assumed that the export total has increased in proportion to increased U. S. shipments to England.

The British, just as we are, are short of machine tools. The latest statistics reveal that the Socialists shipped from England 51,000 tons of finished machine tools and component parts — all to Communist or other foreign lands.

Prime Minister Attlee's Socialist government — just as the Truman administration did in the U. S. — stripped its country of its defenses on the assumption that Russia would lay down and play dead just as soon as she cleared up the rubble from World War II.

Having promised peace and plenty on this assumption, the Socialists here and in Britain were caught with their policies down. After winning elections by promising a brave new world of plenty, the economic control artists had to produce. About halfway down this road to bankruptcy Russia got tough. And nobody scares like a Socialist when things get loud around the Kremlin.

Instead of peace and plenty, with free wigs, free false teeth and two chickens in every pot, the British Socialists and their compatriots here had to rearm their countries or get booted out of office.

Attlee's government, too far down the Socialist road to creeping ruin to turn back, is now trying to convince the British people that Russia is to blame for their economic plight. Well, it wasn't the British or American people who wanted to lie down with the Russians. The people were too smart. It was just our leaders.

You don't have to be very ancient to remember when you could go into any number of restaurants and find a "blue plate special," with all the fixins, for half a dollar... or less.

Today you can get a meal as good and as filling but it will probably cost twice as much. But don't blame the restaurant manager or chef for the high prices on today's menus. Blame the dollar! It just won't buy what it used to.

The dollar is making things mighty tough for us, too.

The cost of supplies and equipment used in the telephone business is going up and up, just like the cost of supplies and equipment for other businesses... and just like the cost of food and household supplies for you.

In spite of all this, we have been able to provide good, low-cost telephone service that continues to grow in value day by day.

Even if it should cost more, telephone service... in comparison with other things... would still be a big, big bargain.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

The South and Truman

Washington, Oct. 8.

Next month the governors of some twelve Southern states, with a total of 118 electoral votes, will meet at Hot Springs, Ark., for conferences. The open purpose of this meeting is not to devise ways by which Mr. Truman can be prevented from renominating himself in July or to get rid of him should he be renominated.

Nevertheless, those ideas will be close to the hearts and constantly in the minds of those who attend. They may come up in the conference itself. Certainly they will be the chief topics of conversation among the governors and, without official action, it is expected there will emerge from this conference and these conversations a plan to achieve the objective which they almost unanimously desire. For the plain fact is the South is in revolt against the Democratic party as at present constituted and managed. Whether the revolt can become effective depends upon a number of

Miss Joan MacSherry is Wed Saturday to R. W. Anderson

TULLYTOWN, Oct. 8.—During a double ring ceremony, Saturday afternoon at two o'clock, Miss Joan Alice MacSherry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Leigh, here, became the bride of Mr. Richard Wilmer Anderson, son of Mr. Wilmer Anderson, here, in Tullytown Methodist Church with the Rev. Samuel Gaskell performing the ceremony.

The edifice was decorated with palms and baskets of chrysanthemums. Miss Dorothy Gaskell served as organist and accompanist for Percy Ford, Bristol, who sang "O Promise Me," "Because," "At Dawning," and "I Love You Truly." The bride, given in marriage by William Leigh, chose a white satin gown having a fitted bodice, scalloped at the waistline; long sleeves ending in a point over the hands, bertha collar trimmed with lace, long full skirt ending in a long train. The finger-tip veil of illusion lace was attached to a tiara of lace and satin. The bridal cascade bouquet consisted of white roses and stephanotis, centered with a purple orchid. The bride's slippers were white satin.

The gown selected for the maid of honor, Miss Marjorie Swangler, here, was of shrimp toned rayon bengaline, strapless, with self scrolling outlining the draped bosom. Identical scrolling trimmed the neckline of the tiny matching caplet making it appear part of the gown. The skirt was full and floor length. Miss Swangler's headpiece was a band of the same material as the gown. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow gladioli with shrimp toned streamers. Her slippers were shrimp toned satin.

The bridesmaids, Miss Dorothy Carmen, Tullytown, cousin of the bride, and Miss Jeanette Hibbs, Edgely, wore gowns fashioned similar to the maid of honor's. Miss Carmen's in beige and carried fuchsia gladioli with the same shade streamers; Miss Hibbs' gown was emerald green and bouquet of fuchsia gladioli with matching ribbon. Their headpieces and slippers were identical to Miss Swangler's in tones to match their gowns.

Miss Mary Ellen Leigh, who served as flower girl, wore a gown of shrimp tone fashioned similar to the other attendants, carried a small basket of mixed flowers. A band of the same tone material as the gown formed her headpiece. Her slippers were white.

A reception was held at five p. m. at Washington Crossing Inn for 100 guests.

Following two weeks motor trip to Florida, the newlyweds will reside at the home of the bridegroom's father. For the trip, Mrs. Anderson chose a two-piece black wool gabardine suit, aqua hat and gloves, black handbag and shoes.

Today's Quiet Moment

The Rev. Edward G. Yeomans
Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church

Our loving and eternal God and Father, we come into Thy presence with thanksgiving and supplication. We thank Thee for the day just past with its opportunity for fellowship and worship in Thy sanctuary. It was good for us to meet around the Lord's table and to remember His great love in our behalf as He gave Himself a ransom for us. For herein hath God commended His love toward us in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. And now we would petition Thy divine blessing and guidance to be with us as we go into a new week with its labors and responsibilities. Keep us from doing wrong, quicken us as we would do the right — forgive us for our many failures. All this we ask in Jesus' name. Amen.

and the orchid from her bridal bouquet as a corsage.

The bride's mother for the ceremony chose a blue-gray crepe street-length dress, mink furpiece, gray accessories and a purple orchid corsage.

The bride, a graduate of Pennsylvania high school, class of 1950, is employed by Paterson Parchment Paper Co., Edgely. Mr. Anderson, a graduate of Fallington High School, class of '43, is employed as a civil engineer by McCloskey and Co., Philadelphia.

day for themselves and farmers of the surrounding areas.

When asked to compare Bristol as it is now as to when she was here last, Miss Harman stated, "The modernized store fronts, the better paved roads and the better-kept homes make for a more progressive and prosperous looking community, but the traffic and the 'hot rod' drivers are a menace. The influx of new families and the building program is so extensive that it is truly breath-taking... an honest-to-goodness 'boom town', but the real Bristolians are taking it in stride."

During her stay here, Miss Harman will renew acquaintances and visit many old friends, showing Bristol off to her ranching "pod" or Miss Phelps, who says in a typically Texan drawl, "Town's small, compared to Texas, but it shore is mighty!"

Five Buildings For School Now Finished

schools will be kindergarten through grade five. Miss Ruth Draper has been named head teacher in charge of this session.

When the housing program is complete in this area there will be approximately 3,500 homes erected, it is claimed. From time to time more classrooms will have to be acquired to take care of the influx of new students.

The recent survey made by the Pennsylvania Economy League in Falls Township recommended a new elementary school be built in the Pennsylvania School district "as soon as possible."

This would tend to relieve the stress in the elementary classrooms since part of "Levittown" is also within the boundary of Falls Township, Ingraham said.

Army Corporal and Seaman Meet Death in Auto Crash

USS "Chukawan," an oiler, is based.

Mrs. Kutger stated today that the trio had been at the Kutger home about an hour yesterday afternoon, they stopping to pay a call on her husband. "They left here about 3:30 or four o'clock," she added. Mrs. Kutger, having met one of the young men for the first time, and not knowing the others well, was unable to give any details as to their survivors.

The body of Cpl. Haney was removed to the funeral home of J. Maurice Tomlinson, Cornwells Heights. It will be forwarded to an army base in Philadelphia.

During the height of the wind and electrical storm which broke over this area last evening, one of the large plate glass windows in the front of the Acme Market, Pond street, was blown in. Firemen and police were called. Firemen hung a large tarpaulin to protect the stock on the inside of the store.

After authorities were notified a guard was placed at the store until opening time this morning.

In scattered spots tree limbs were blown down.

The Nesbamiy Creek, which had reached such a low point that the J. E. Frick Co. cordage mill at Hulmeville was forced to close down last week, suddenly had several feet of water rapidly flowing between its banks.

The storm also caused the postponement of cornerstone-laying program for the new $251,000 First Presbyterian Church, at Morrisville. The exercises have been re-scheduled for next Sunday, the edifice to be completed by Easter.

The program was underway when a down-pour prevented actual laying of the cornerstone. The pastor, the Rev. Clifford G. Pollock, had delivered the invocation and led responsive reading at the outdoor services at the site of the new church.

Mayor William Burgess, Morrisville, extended greetings. Clifford E. Hood, executive vice-president of the U. S. Steel Co., made the principal address. The church is located only three miles from the new Fairless plant of the steel company. The Rev. Dr. William F. Wefer, executive secretary of the Philadelphia Presbytery, led the prayer of consecration. A metal box containing a Bible, church history and membership and newspaper clippings was about to be placed in the cornerstone. Rain, which already had interrupted the proceedings twice, then fell heavily and the postponement was announced.

HELLO, AUTUMN!

Though we were loath to part with Summer

We bid the lass adieu,
Because you are the "up and comer"

And we have welcomed you,
To stay with us awhile and frost

Your gorgeous color scheme
Throughout woodland and spin across

A babbling silver stream;
To splash the ancient hills and dales

With golden bars of splendor,
While some ingenious artist sails

Out on a canvas bender,
You've tuned in with a generous mass

Of pungent odors which

Can make the most exacting lass
Extravagantly rich.

Apples are ripe, the pumpkins bright
As golden nuggets glaring—

We get a roaming appetite
That takes us thoroughfaring.

Into the heart of Nature's realm
To share your interlude,

Which has the power to overwhelm—
Capture our every mood.

We know you have a load of thrills
To scatter here and yonder

That gives the mountains, dales and hills
Intoxicating wonder.

When we inhale that vibrant tang
Of spicy stimulation

We tend to get a royal bang
Of rich imagination.

That keeps our hope forever new
In fertile fields of fancy

That never lets us down with too
Much blundering mischancy.

Your moon against the midnight blue
Comes out from under cover—

Bringing his gorgeous retinue
To take the Heavens over.

Children are really back in school
Their prospects very bright

Under a most exacting rule
Which gives us a respite.

To delve into the flaming story
You take pains to install.

And weave into a pot of glory
When you give us a call.

You bolster man's morale and give Him courage to insure

His confidence in life and live
A life that will endure
